WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

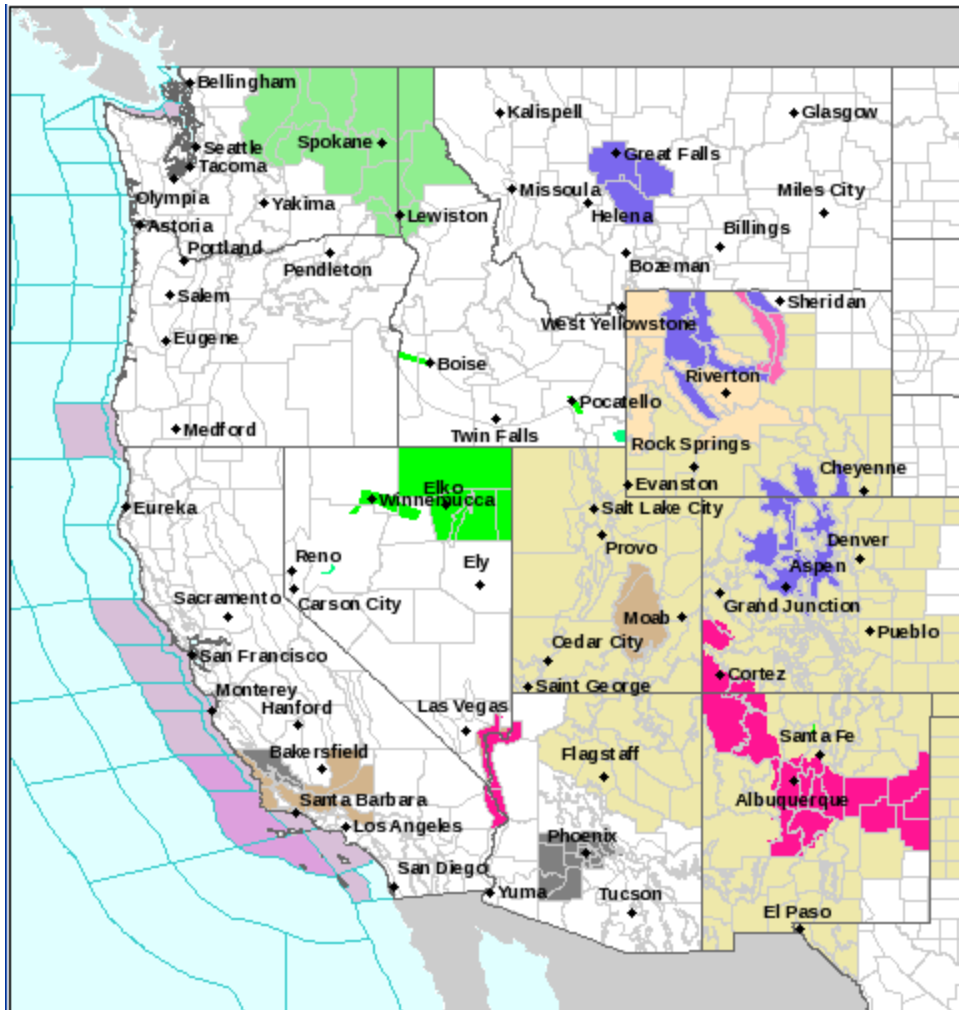

The low pressure trough responsible for the recent wet weather throughout Northern California will move off to the east today. A few lingering showers in the northern and eastern mountains will dissipate by early this afternoon. High pressure will build overhead late today and produce sunny, warm, and dry weather on Friday, with northerly surface winds gusting to 25 mph. Another trough will reach the West Coast on Saturday and produce cool and breezy weather with partly to mostly cloudy skies. A few showers are possible in far northern areas late Saturday through Sunday. A third system will bring periods of light rain to most of the region Monday through next Thursday. Beyond that it looks like a longer dry and warm stretch with occasional gusty N-NE winds.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The back side of a Pacific trough will bring northwest winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph to the mountain ridges and desert passes through this afternoon. Temperatures will warm a couple degrees today, with 50s to low 60s across the mountains and 70s to low 80s in the valleys. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 20% and 40% away from the deserts today. A strong ridge of high pressure will move into the West Coast from the Pacific Ocean bringing significant warming Friday. Temperatures will warm a few more degrees away from the coast Saturday as the ridge starts to move off to the east. Maximum temperatures will be in the 60s to low 70s across the mountains and 80s to low 90s in the valleys Friday, with mid 60s to mid 70s across the mountains and mid 80s to mid 90s in the valleys Saturday. Minimum humidity will be mainly in the single digits and teens Friday and Saturday. North winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the South Coast of Santa Barbara and the Grapevine tonight and then northeast to east winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will surface across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California Friday morning. Winds will become light across the entire area by Friday evening. A significant cool down and a large increase in humidity will take place Sunday as a trough moves inland across the Pacific Northwest. Temperatures will be near to a little above normal Sunday through the middle of next week as troughs continue to move inland across the Pacific Northwest. Westerly winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the wind prone mountain and desert areas Saturday night through the middle of next week.
